BITTER FIGHT OVER RUSSIAN MARKET IS ON

U. S. Treasury Bars Pulpwood and Things Made by Soviet Convict Trade.

WASHINGTON, July 26—The sudden decision of the treasury to bar importations of pulpwood from Russia today was regarded as only the beginning of bitter controversy with Soviet authorities over their attempts to exploit the rich American buying market.

An investigation now is under way which may result in a similar embargo being placed against importations of lumber, and the treasury has been urged by Pennsylvania anthracite interests to take steps to halt coal imports.

While these questions are engaging the treasury, the fish congressional committee has been engaged in a tilt with officials of the Amtorg Trading Corporation, official Soviet Russian Commercial Agency, in New York in pursuing the congressional "Red" investigation.

During the New York hearing of Amtorg officials veiled threats were made by them of retaliation against the United States by a decrease in buying. Russia is now an excellent customer of the United States, with a trade running above $100,000,000 a year. In June an increase in Russian purchases stood out as the only bright spot in a review of American foreign trade.

Assistant Secretary of the Treasury Lowman, who issued the embargo against pulpwood importations, explained the action was mandatory under the 1930 tariff act, which prohibits importation of convict-made goods.

The decision, however, was reached immediately after the Lowman regarded sufficient evidence was placed in his hands.

The Amtorg Trading Corporation and the International Paper Company, parties to the pulpwood deal, were not invited to answer the charges.

The outcry against Russian convict-made goods started during consideration of the tariff law in Congress, when a group of Pennsylvania representatives asserted the anthracite coal market was depressed by Soviet sales in this country.

Under the tariff act coal will not come under the ban until 1932. Representative Brumm (R) of Pennsylvania asserted the industry may be seriously injured by that time. A study of the coal situation is now being made by an inter-departmental committee upon request of the House Ways and Means committee.

The lumber protest was lodged by the American Wage Earners Protective Conference, with Matthew Wolf of the American Federation of Labor as the chief spokesman.

While Secretary of State Stimson declined to place his official stamp of approval upon efforts to investigate the situation, the treasury now is making efforts to collect evidence on the lumber situation.

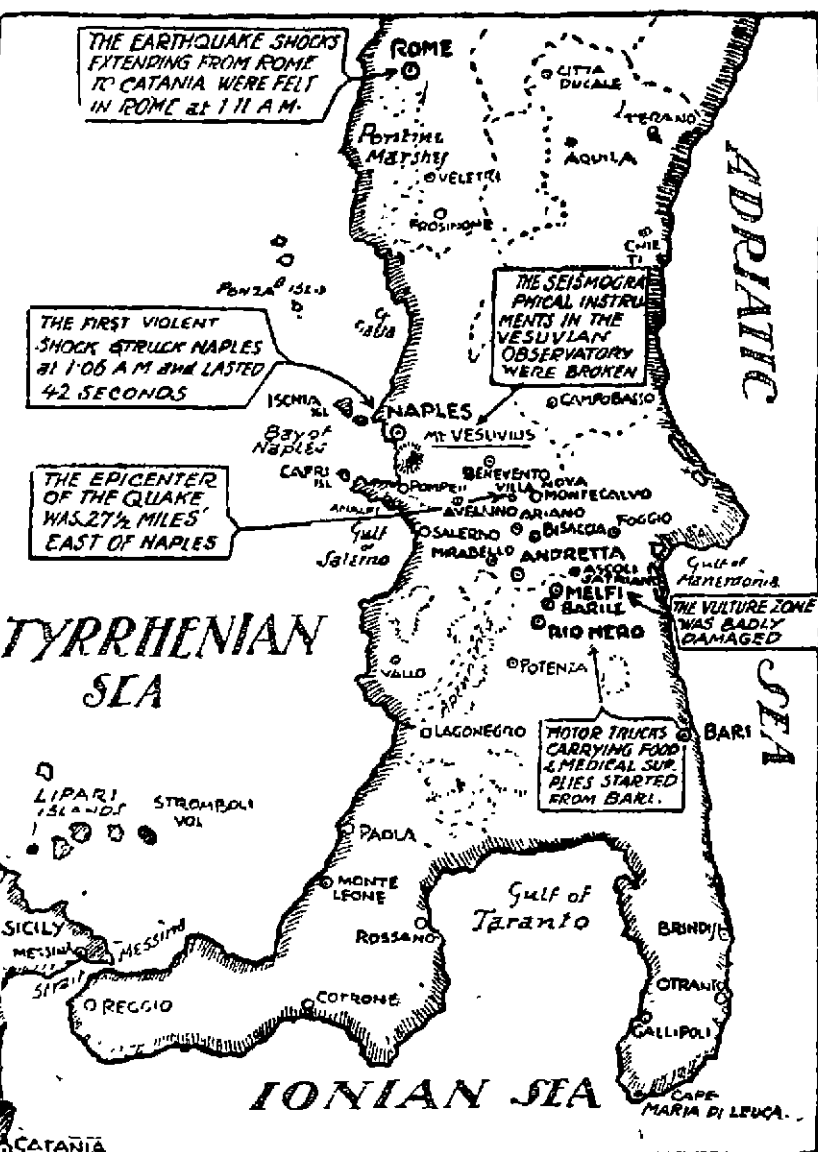

Anti-Soviet Russian leaders in this country have charged that the Soviet "Five Year Program" of economic development includes production of great quantities of goods by convict labor and the flooding of foreign markets to upset domestic situations and pave the way for Soviet propaganda.

Envoy's Butler to Wed Girl of Old Nobility

Miss Gytha Stourton, great-granddaughter of the fourteenth Duke of Norfolk, who can trace her noble lineage back to the days of William the Conqueror, it was learned, expects soon to be married to Francis Del'Agnesse, former butler to Sir Esme Howard, former English Ambassador to the United States.

In the Pathway of Disaster

From the beautiful city of Naples to "the toe of the boot," the most southern tip of Italy is the scene of death and destruction as the result of the earthquake. The death toll has been set at more than 3,000 while many thousands are hurt and left homeless. The map shows the principal towns in the devastated area.

OHIO CANDIDATES SPEED UP CAMPAIGNS, PRIMARY NEARS

Cooper Returns From Vacation To Try To Retain Seat—McCulloch to Set Up Headquarters in Columbus—White of Marietta Showing Much Activity.

COLUMBUS, O., July 26—With Ohio's primary elections only about two weeks away, political candidates today are planning increased activities in the Buckeye state.

Returning from a week's vacation and fishing trip in Northern Ohio and Michigan, Governor Myers Y. Cooper is expected to give more attention to his quest for re-nomination at the polls on August 12.

U. S. Senator Roscoe C. McCulloch is scheduled to open headquarters here this week and launch an active campaign for the Republican nomination to succeed himself in the upper branch of Congress.

Highlights in a summary of political activities during the past week include:

Former State Representative Stephen M. Young, of Cleveland, a candidate for the Democratic gubernatorial nomination, endorsed the proposal that Ohio's legislature pass an old-age pension law.

Former Congressman George White, Marietta, issues a statement dealing with the state government expenditures, declaring that the actual available balance in the state's general revenue fund, on June 30, totaled only $107,891, as compared with a balance of $105,831.91 on Dec. 31.

Former Congressman Robert J. Bulkeley, Cleveland, a candidate for the Democratic nomination for United States senator, declared that he will not compromise in his demand for the repeal of the federal prohibition amendment. He promised, also, if elected, to vote for the repeal of the Volstead act.

Announcement was made by William Rasey, Sandusky, chairman of the Ohio legislative board of the Brotherhood of Railroad Trainmen, that the board and the women's auxiliary to this organization have endorsed the candidacy of former Congressman John McSweeney, Wooster, for the Democratic nomination for United States senator.

LAMBERT Field, St. Louis, July 26—Outrigger a stiff gale which blew up late yesterday the "Great St. Louis" endurance plane which is piloted by Dale "Red" Jackson and Forest O'Brien swooned serenely into the sixth day of its communion with the clouds today.

At the first sight of the wind laden clouds the endurance plane dipped low like a swallow over the field sending in a hurry call for more gas. With a 42-mile gale whipping through the struts 75 gallons of fuel was transferred. The two former holders of the world's endurance time passed their 120th hour in the air at 7 11 a. m. this morning.

ROSEVELT Field, N. Y., July 26—Louis Reichers and Robert Black, striving for a new refusing endurance record in a Stinson monoplane, passed the 131st hour mark in the air this morning.

Two hours earlier the refusing plane made its twenty-third contact of the flight, descending gasoline oil, the fliers' breakfast, newspapers and telegrams.

DUISBURG, Germany, July 26—Residents of Altstadt, a suburb of Duisburg, were thrown into a panic today by an tremor which threw pictures from walls and plates from shelves in scores of homes.

No further tremors followed the initial shock, however, and the town soon returned to normal.

CAMPAIGN OF G. O. P. IS PUT IN NEW HANDS

Simeon Fess To Succeed Huston As Chairman—Party Is Not Optimistic.

WASHINGTON, July 26—Republican fortunes in the oncoming Congressional campaign are to be entrusted to a wholly new and untried directing personnel.

The shake-up in the administrative organization of the party just completed by party leaders is the most sweeping in many years.

Claudius Huston, storm center of one of the querrier rows which the G. O. P. has ever had, steps down as national chairman Aug. 7. He will be succeeded on the same date by Senator Simeon Fess, of Ohio, probably the most regular of all the Republican regulars.

But Fess' chairmanship is to be of the emeritus type. It has never been considered quite the thing for a sitting senator to be the active party chairman, because chairman must solicit and produce contributions, and legislators aren't supposed to do that, at least openly.

LUCAS NEW MAN
The active chairmanship of the party will devolve upon Robert H. Lucas, now internal revenue collector, who is to be given the title of chairman of the national executive committee. Lucas is a Kentuckian, only recently come into politics.

Thus the Republican organization is to model itself upon the Democratic organization, which also has a chairman-emeritus in John J. Raskob, and an active, energetic chairman in J. P. Morgan.

It has been the effectiveness of the re-organized Democratic machinery, as demonstrated in the last session of Congress, that moved the Republican leaders to follow suit in arranging the new set-up.

It is no secret that Republican leaders face the November elections with anything but confidence. They cannot possibly hope to increase their representation in either House or Senate because it already is at the highest peak attainable. The best that can happen to the Republicans is to hold what they already have, and no one believes that is possible in this year of spotty business depression, agricultural distress, and dissatisfaction with general conditions in many quarters.

Some of the more pessimistic G. O. P. chiefs privately concede a strong possibility of losing control of the House, although it would require one of the greatest turn-overs in history to accomplish that. The present house has a Republican majority of 103, which would require the Democrats to capture some 52 or 53 seats to control. That many seats have never changed hands in a single election, save in 1912, the year of the great republican split.

TO LOSE SEATS
With wheat selling at the lowest figure in many years, however, and other commodities far down the price list, and with general business conditions what they are the loss of many republican seats is conceded even by the republicans themselves.

Also, this is what is known as a "pendulum year," the year between presidential elections when the pendulum swings against the party in power.

The prospects of a spectacular Republican up accompanying the shift of control in party machinery has all but evaporated. For a time, while the anti-Hustons were endeavoring to oust the chairman, it was reported, that the much-harassed Tennessee would step down only at the price of tearing the lid off many party secrets. He was resentful at what he considered "a raw deal" and the understanding is that it required powerful persuasion to dissuade him from rattling some party skeletons that have been in the closet since 1928.

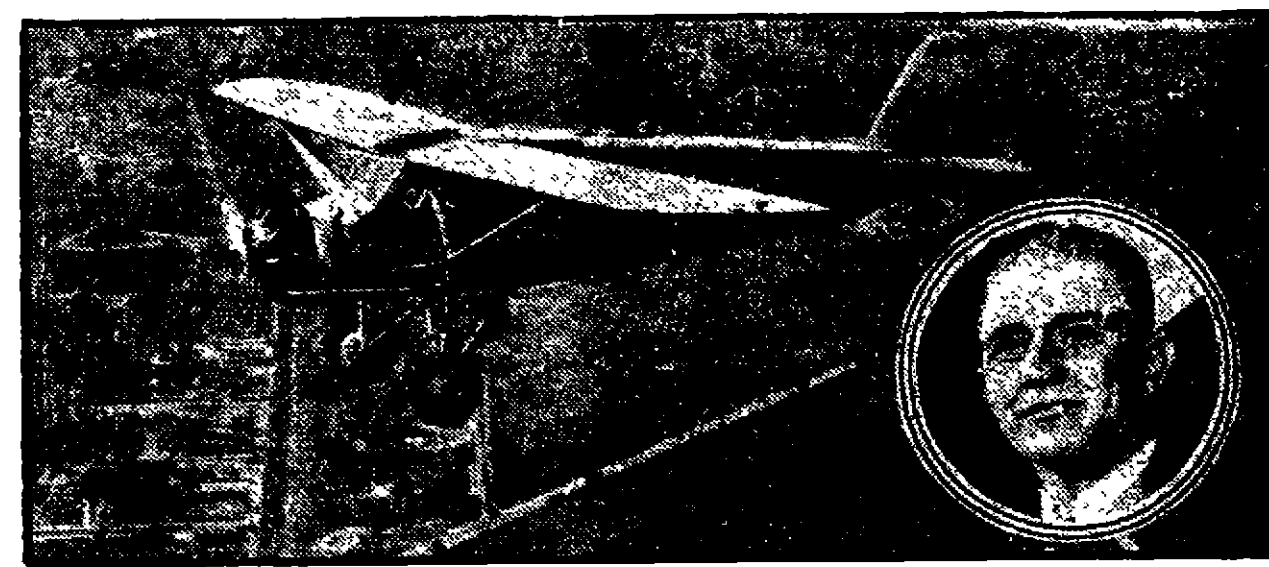

The last word, however, is that Mr. Huston is to retire gracefully, and wish his successor all kinds of luck. The capital cynics say he will need it in November.

CLEVELAND, July 26—Two alleged safecrackers were captured by police here today while they were attempting to break into the strongbox in the office of the Ford's Furniture store.

The pair, who surrendered without resistance, gave their names as Warren Calabrese, 28, and Arthur Weiss, 28. Both are said by police to have lengthy criminal records.

Condition Of Urbana Woman Is Critical; Ned Thacher, Jr. Hurt As Cars Crash In Dust Cloud son, to wrest away laurels for endurance now held by Hunter Brothers, of Chicago.

Florence Chapel-Pk at Grant Swearingen Farm, Scene of Collision.

Mrs. Bertha Woodruff, aged 48, of Urbana, O., is in a critical condition in Berger hospital and is not expected to live, following an accident on the Florence Chapel-Pk in Jackson-Twp Friday at 8 p. m. when the car in which she was riding, driven by Russell Reel, 35, of Urbana, collided with the Marquette sedan driven by Ned Thacher, Jr., son of Col. and Mrs. Ned Thacher, Jackson-Twp.

Mrs. Woodruff is suffering from a crushed chest, a lacerated forehead, and lacerated arm and chin. She was in a semi-conscious condition all through Friday night and Saturday was having hemorrhages.

Young Thacher, who was driving his father's car and was its only passenger, is a patient in the hospital, suffering from a laceration of his left wrist, all the tendons being severed, the loss of four teeth and wounds on his scalp. His condition is not thought serious.

OTHER PATIENTS
Other patients in the hospital Saturday, following the wreck were:

Harley Woodruff, 55, husband of the injured woman, suffering from lacerations of the nose, it being split open, and lacerations to his right forearm. His condition is favorable.

Jackson Woodruff, 10, a son, was treated at the hospital for a fractured right arm and a lacerated painful breast and lacerations.

Grace Woodruff, 15, was treated for a cut nose and excoriations of both ankles.

Russell Reel, 35, Urbana, O., the driver of the car in which the Woodruffs were riding, is suffering from a fractured left knee-cap. He is cut and bruised slightly but was removed from the hospital.

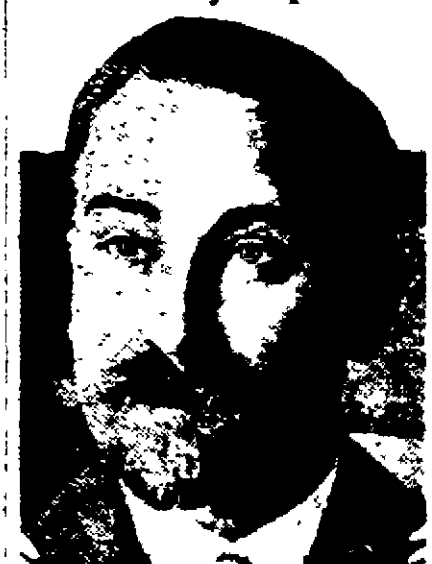

DUST IS CAUSE
The collision of the Ford roadster, driven by Reel, and the Marquette, driven by Thacher, is said to have occurred when neither of the drivers could see the other on account of dust thrown up by an automobile speeding toward Fox Post Office. Thacher was driving from this city to his home and the Reel car was being driven to the home of Ed Woodward, whose wife is a sister to Mr. Woodruff. The Woodwards live on the Grant Swearingen farm.

The cars crashed just before the Reel car turned into the Woodward lane.

Three of the passengers of the Ford were riding in the rumble seat with the other three in front. Those in the rumble seat were the three Woodruff children, all of whom were cut considerably by being thrown against the back of the car. The others in the front seat, including Mr. and Mrs. Woodruff and Reel, received the force of the collision.

The hospital was notified to prepare for the injured persons who were all rushed there. Drs. Shane, Courtright, Jackson and Holman were called, all of whom worked on the injured persons from 8:30 p. m. until after midnight.

Red Activities Probe May Expel Him

Peter A. Bogdanov, head of the Amtorg Trading Corporation, is being investigated by the United States, where suspicion and that of his colleagues, is threatened as a result of the Congressional Committee's probe of Communist activities in the country.

CARS CRASH IN S. COURT

Woman, Trying To Back From Parking Place, Drives In Path of Coupe.

Both cars were badly damaged Friday evening about 8 p. m. when Miss Helen Melson, N. Court-street, driving a Chevrolet sedan, attempted to drive out of her parking space in front of Wilder's Drug Store and collided with the Chevrolet coupe, driven by Arnold Gibbs, salesman at G. H. Adkins garage.

The Gibbs car was damaged mostly at the front axle was broken, the fenders bent and the body of the car badly banged up.

The Melson car was badly damaged in the rear.

The Gibbs car was taken to the Adkins garage for repairs.

THARP WILL IS PROBATED

Children Named Beneficiaries
In Estate of Late Williamsport Resident.

His children are made beneficiaries in the last will and testament of the late Asa J. Tharp of Williamsport which was filed in probate court Friday by Judge E. A. Brown.

His daughter, Hattie Jane Glazier is given the bake shop property in Ashville, and another daughter, Jessie McMillen is given his seven room residence in Williamsport.

His son, H. L. Tharp of Williamsport, was given a note for $15,000.

He asked that Richard Simkins be named executor of the estate and asked him to sell any other real estate not specifically devised and to be given to his three children to share and share alike.

The estate is estimated to be worth $6,500, $6,000 of which is real estate.

The will was written February 15, 1928 in the presence of Mr. and Mrs. L. N. Abernethy.

C. E. Hill, Lee Luellen and Andrew Schwartz, of Williamsport, are appraisers.

COLUMBUS PAIR HELD IN BASTLE

Dudley Wiseman and Bertha Conrad, S. Front-st, Columbus, were arrested late Friday evening on E. Mound-st by Chief Police Warner and Officer Seal and lodged in the city bastille on a charge of intoxication.

They will be given a hearing before Mayor E. T. Hodges sometime Saturday.

Miss Helen Morris of Cleveland, and Mrs. Loren Evans have been called home from the Lancaster camp grounds by the critical illness of their father T. J. Morris of N. Court-st.

Plant Rye and Not Wheat Says Renick Dunlap

"Plant rye instead of wheat as a means of lessing the overproduction of wheat," states Renick W. Dunlap, a Kingston, assistant secretary of agriculture, very well known in this city.

Mr. Dunlap points out that his experience on his own 1000 acre farm in this and Ross-co has taught him that wheat alone is not a profitable crop, and that a profitable substitute could be found to take its place in crop rotation.

Planting rye as a substitute crop would be a solution for the overproduction of wheat, Mr. Dunlap says.

THIEVES STEAL HOG, KILL IT

Pen of Finley Greenlee, S.
Washington-St., Entered
During Past Week.

Officer William McCrady of the police department, is investigating the theft of a hog which was stolen from the pens of Finley Greenlee, S. Washington street, this city, behind the Winco Canning Co., sometime this week, and later killed south of the city.

When the theft was discovered Greenlee notified the police department and Officer McCrady, along with Greenlee, immediately began an investigation.

The investigators traced the thieves by their foot-steps from the pens into a corn field of H. M. Crites, south of town, where they discovered the hog had been killed and the feet and head buried.

According to Officer McCrady, the thieves had carried the hog to that spot which at the time because of the weeds and corn was invisible and then killed it.

MEXICO MOURNS FOR FIVE DEAD

MEXICO CITY, July 26—A national day of mourning was in prospect today as Mexico planned a state funeral for the four army aces and one civilian killed in yesterday's midair crash.

The collision took place in the course of maneuvers of 15 planes comprising two squadrons of the First Air Regiment. The falling planes crashed a handball player on the court upon which they fell.

The accident was perhaps the worst in Mexican military aviation, adding another tragedy to its long list. Those killed included Captain Raul Muga, Lieutenant Humberto Enriquez, Lieutenant Napoleon Rojas, Lieutenant Pablo Cases Lopez, and an unidentified handball player.

The government is conducting an inquiry.

Mary Belle Jean and Dale Goodman of near Fox visited their grandmother, Mrs. Mary McDill of Wayne-Twp recently.

JUNIOR ORDER IS ORGANIZED

C. Radcliff, W. Brown and A.
Crist Are Elected Trustees of Chapter Here.

Circleville council No. 383, Junior O. U. A. M. was duly organized here Friday evening with the following officers being selected:

C. Radcliff, W. Brown and A. Crist, trustees; Roy Groce, councilor; James Pearce, vice councilor; Clifford White, chaplain; Donald Mason, recorder; Clark Baughman, financial secretary; L. E. Stevenson, treasurer; Ross Kirkpatrick, past officer and representative to the state convention; Russell Trone, warden; L. M. Tenor, conductor; H. E. Given, assistant secretary; W. Brown, inside sentinel; E. S. Tith, outside sentinel.

M. T. Blythe, district deputy, was in charge of the meeting.

Meetings will be held every Friday evening in the hall of the Modern Woodmen. The charter is still open for new members. Initiation will be Aug. 8.

SUSPECT IN HOLDUP HELD

Man Receives Two Bullets In Attempting To Rob Professor's House.

COLUMBUS, O., July 26—With a bullet in his shoulder and another in his hip, Henry C. Elliott, 34, was arrested by police here this morning and was taken to a hospital for removal of the lead slugs.

Elliott is being held as a suspect in an attempted robbery at Ohio State University Friday night.

A watchman, H. M. Cole, reported he discovered a man in the act of rifling the desk of a professor in the Animal Husbandry building. When the burglar, after being ordered to hold up his hands, reached toward his hip pocket, Cole fired twice. The man escaped through a side door. Blood on the floor of the office showed that at least one of the shots took effect.

Elliott, who was taken into custody at a local hotel, refused to give his address.

TIRE BLOWOUT FATAL TO ONE

DAYTON, O., July 26—The blowout of a tire, it was believed today, caused the death of one motorist and the injuries of three others on the Covington pike near here Friday evening.

After skidding from the highway, the car overturned twice.

Mrs. Anna Schenck, 32, of Hamilton, was instantly killed. Her niece, Mrs. Helen Sharkey, also of Hamilton, is in a critical condition today, due to a fractured skull. The latter's son, Neil, 8, may not survive his injuries. Miss Alma Huber, 42, sister of Mrs. Schenck, was seriously hurt.

His children are made beneficiaries in the last will and testament of the late Asa J. Tharp of Williamsport which was filed in probate court Friday by Judge E. A. Brown.

His daughter, Hattie Jane Glazier is given the bake shop property in Ashville, and another daughter, Jessie McMillen is given his seven room residence in Williamsport.

His son, H. L. Tharp of Williamsport, was given a note for $1,500.

He asked that Richard Simkins be named executor of the estate and asked him to sell any other real estate not specifically devised and to be given to his three children to share and share alike.

The estate is estimated to be worth $6,500, $6,000 of which is real estate.

The will was written February 15, 1929 in the presence of Mr. and Mrs. I. N. Abernethy.

C. E. Hill, Lee Luellen and Andrew Schwartz, of Williamsport, are appraisers.

COLUMBUS PAIR HELD IN BASTILE

Dudley Wiseman and Bertha Conrad, S. Front-st, Columbus were arrested late Friday evening on E. Mount-st by Chief Police Warner and Officer Seall and lodged in the city bastille on a charge of intoxication.

They will be given a hearing before Mayor B. T. Hedges sometime Saturday.

Miss Helen Morris of Cleveland, and Mrs. Loren Evans have been called home from the Lancaster camp grounds by the critical illness of their father T. J. Morris of N. Court-st.

Plant Rye and Not Wheat Says Renick Dunlap

"Plant rye instead of wheat as a means of lessing the overproduction of wheat," states Renick W. Dunlap, a Kingston, assistant secretary of agriculture, very well known in this city.

Mr. Dunlap points out that his experience on his own 1000 acre farm in this and Ross-co has taught him that wheat alone is not a profitable crop, and that a paying substitute could be found to take its place in crop rotation. Planting rye as a substitute crop would be a solution for the overproduction of wheat, Mr. Dunlap says.

THIEVES STEAL HOG, KILL IT

Pen of Finley Greenlee, S. Washington-St, Entered During Past Week.

Officer William McCrady of the police department, is investigating the theft of a hog which was stolen from the pens of Finley Greenlee, S. Washington street, this city, behind the Wincoor Canning Co., sometime this week, and later killed south of the city.

When the theft was discovered Greenlee notified the police department and Officer McCrady, along with Greenlee, immediately began an investigation.

The investigators traced the thieves by their foot-steps from the pens into a corn field of H. M. Crites, south of town, where they discovered the hog had been killed and the feet and head buried.

According to Officer McCrady the thieves had carried the hog to that spot which at the time because of the weeds and corn was invisible and then killed it.

MEXICO MOURNS FOR FIVE DEAD

MEXICO CITY, July 26—A national day of mourning was in prospect today as Mexico planned a state funeral for the four army aces and one civilian killed in yesterday's midair crash.

The collision took place in the course of maneuvers of 18 planes comprising two squadrons of the First Air Regiment. The falling planes crashed a handball player on the court upon which they fell.

The accident was perhaps the worst in Mexican military aviation, adding another tragedy to its long list. Those killed included Captain Raul Mugica, Lieutenant Humberto Enriquez, Lieutenant Napoleon Rojo, Lieutenant Pablo Caso Lopez, and an unidentified handball player.

The government is conducting an inquiry.

Mary Belle, Jean and Dale Goodman of near Fox visited their grandmother, Mrs. Mary McDill of Wayne-twp recently.

JUNIOR ORDER IS ORGANIZED

C. Radcliff, W. Brown and A. Crist Are Elected Trustees of Chapter Here.

Circleville council No. 383, Junior O. U. A. M. was duly organized here Friday evening with the following officers being elected:

C. Radcliff, W. Brown and A. Crist, trustees; Roy Groce, councilor; James Pearce, vice councilor; Clifford White, chaplain; Donald Mason, recorder; Clark Baughman, financial secretary; L. E. Stevenson, treasurer; Ross Kirkpatrick, past officer and representative to the state convention; Russell Trone, warden; L. M. Tenor, conductor; H. B. Given, assistant secretary; W. Brown, inside sentinel; E. S. Tith, outside sentinel.

M. T. Blythe, district deputy, was in charge of the meeting. Meetings will be held every Friday evening in the hall of the Modern Woodmen. The charter is still open for new members. Initiation will be Aug. 8.

SUSPECT IN HOLDUP HELD

Man Receives Two Bullets In Attempting To Rob Professor's House.

COLUMBUS, O., July 26—With a bullet in his shoulder and another in his hip, Henry C. Elliott, 34, was arrested by police here this morning and was taken to a hospital for removal of the lead slugs.

Elliott is being held as a suspect in an attempted robbery at Ohio State University Friday night.

A watchman, H. M. Cole, reported he discovered a man in the act of rifling the desk of a professor in the Animal Husbandry building. When the burglar, after being ordered to hold up his hands, reached toward his hip pocket, Cole fired twice. The man escaped through a side door. Blood on the floor of the office showed that at least one of the shots took effect.

Elliott, who was taken into custody at a local hotel, refused to give his address.

TIRE BLOWOUT FATAL TO ONE

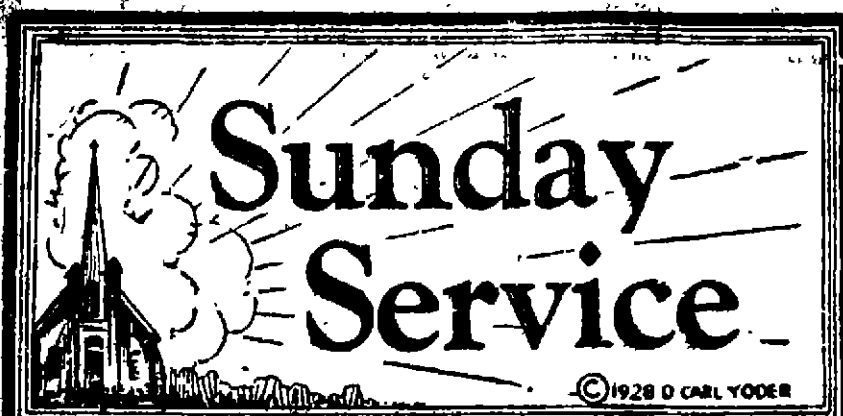

DAYTON, O., July 26—The blowout of a tire, it was believed today, caused the death of one motorist and the injuries of three others on the Covington pike near here Friday evening.

After skidding from the highway, the car overturned twice.

Mrs. Anna Schenck, 32, of Hamilton, was instantly killed. Her niece, Mrs. Helen Sharkey, also of Hamilton, is in a critical condition today, due to a fractured skull. The latter's son, Neil, 9, may not survive his injuries. Miss Alma Huber, 42, sister of Mrs. Schenck, was seriously hurt.

AN EXAMPLE IN SERVICE
Sir Harry Lauder was in Australia in 1914, and his son, just out of Cambridge University, was visiting him. One day, there was a cablegram for Lieutenant Lauder (who later was promoted to a captain) which read: "Mobilize. Return." The parting message to his father has been given by Sir Harry in the book, "A Minstrel in France."

"So he sailed away. And when I took John's hand and kissed him goodby, I saw him for the last time in civilian clothes (he was killed later in France).
"Well son," I said, "you're going home to be a soldier, a fighting soldier. You will soon be commanding men. Remember that you can never ask a man to do something you would not dare to do yourself!"
"And, oh, the braw look in the eyes of the bonnie laddie as he tilted his chin to me!
"I will remember. Dad!" he said.

on sound lines of good judgement. Lesson Prayer, "Forbid that we should be blind to organized forces of evil and succumb to them; give us a keen sense of the righteousness of God and stir us to fight valiantly the Lord's battles."

The event narrated in this lesson occurred in the time of the judges of Israel, local rulers who were raised up to meet special situations and crisis, often the invasion of a foreign country. Things must sometime get to their worst before regenerating forces are aroused to action, and it was in their darkest hour that a new light broke out in northern Israel.

V. 1. "And the children of Israel again did that which was evil in the sight of Jehovah." The evil thing which they did was the lapse into idolatry brought by intermarriage and social relations with their heathen neighbors.

V. 2. "And Jehovah sold them into the hand of Jabin, king of Canaan, that reigned in Haor." The phrase, "sold them," implies abandonment as man is sold into slavery. The converse process is redemption.

V. 3. "And the children of Israel cried out Jehovah," Sisera, the general of the enemies in battle hand nine hundred chariots of iron and he had been oppressing the northern tribes for twenty years. It is very natural that people pray when in danger; such prayers represent cries of unstable, vacillating folk.

Vs. 4, 5. "Now Deborah, a prophetess judged Israel at that time and the children of Israel came to her for judgment." Deborah, one of the twelve judges of Israel, was a prominent leader, because of the force of her character, a fine discriminating judgment, and an acute faculty of sight into the future; she learned of the suffering of Israel from the hearing of court trials over which she presided.

V. 6. "And she sent and called Barak and said unto him, hath not Jehovah the God of Israel, commanded saying, go draw unto Mount Tabor, and take with thee ten thousand men of the children of Naphtali and of the children of Zebulun?" Deborah speaks as a prophetess, announcing God's commands, not her opinion; declaring God's promises, not merely her own hopes or wishes.

V. 7. "And I will draw unto thee, to the river Kishon, Sisera, the captain of Jabin's army, with his chariots and his multitude; and I will deliver him into thy hand." The promise of God is enough to insure success then as well as now. When God draws near there is no danger for he will deliver.

V. 8. "And Barak said unto her, if thou wilt go with me, then I will go; but if thou wilt not go with me, I will not go." Barak longed for the association of one of God's elect, especially when encountering danger. Deborah's superior ability and leadership did not make Barak jealous; he did not refuse to serve under her because she was a woman.

V. 9. "And she said, I will surely go with thee; notwithstanding, the journey that thou takest shall not be for thine honor; for Jehovah will sell Sisera into the hand of a woman. And Deborah rose and went with Barak to Kadesh." The journey of ninety miles was hard, but Deborah did not flinch. The weakness of leaders is that of seeking leadership and place of power rather than serving God, for the victory Deborah said "shall not be for thine honor."

V. 10. "And Barak called Zebulun and Naphtali together to Kadesh. And there went up ten thousand men at his feet; and Deborah went with him. The beautiful harmony with which these two leading characters worked together was the chief secret of their success.

Goes Back Centuries
In 1333 the plague visited the valleys of the Bavarian highlands and finally claimed about 40 victims in the village of Oberammergau. The vow was taken that if the scourge was turned from their homes the villagers would give once in ten years a play commemorating the life and passion of Christ. The scourge abated, and since that time the "Passion Play" has been given.

Fiery!
"You have made your hero too inflammable, I'm afraid," said the critic to the young author. "To begin with, he has a lantern jaw. In chapter 2 his whole face lit up; in chapter 3 his cheeks flamed. He gave a burning glance in chapter 10 and after blazing with wrath and boiling with rage he administered a scorching rebuke in the last five pages."

Sparrow's Many Songs
One song sparrow may have as many as 20 different songs, says Nature Magazine, each as much his own exclusive property as though copyrighted. But all of these, as well as the songs of all other song sparrows, have certain qualities that proclaim that the singers belong to that species and no other.

Discussion on Questions S.S. Lesson

1. How account for Deborah commanding a position of authority and power.

2. That changes in national and social progress may yet come because of the power of women?

3. What constitutes the armies of wickedness in the United States and how may these armies be overthrown?

4. Why are the battles of peace not so enthusiastically supported as battles of war?

5. What lessons may we learn from Deborah?

6. What avenues of social service are opening to and inviting women? Clericus says, "A sense of Jehovah's presence was the ground of the confidence of the Israelites. It kindled them into a glow of patriotism and armed them with power. However much confidence in God is manifest, nevertheless plans must be made on sound lines of good judgement. Lesson Prayer, "Forbid that we should be blind to organized forces of evil and succumb to them; give us a keen sense of the righteousness of God and stir us to fight valiantly the Lord's battles."

Things must sometime get to their worst before regenerating forces are aroused to action, and it was in their darkest hour that a new light broke out in northern Israel.

V. 1. "And the children of Israel again did that which was evil in the sight of Jehovah." The evil thing which they did was the lapse into idolatry brought by intermarriage and social relations with their heathen neighbors.

V. 2. "And Jehovah sold them into the hand of Jabin, king of Canaan, that reigned in Haor." The phrase, "sold them," implies abandonment as man is sold into slavery. The converse process is redemption.

V. 3. "And the children of Israel cried out Jehovah," Sisera, the general of the enemies in battle hand nine hundred chariots of iron and he had been oppressing the northern tribes for twenty years. It is very natural that people pray when in danger; such prayers represent cries of unstable, vacillating folk.

Vs. 4, 5. "Now Deborah, a prophetess judged Israel at that time and the children of Israel came to her for judgment." Deborah, one of the twelve judges of Israel, was a prominent leader, because of the force of her character, a fine discriminating judgment, and an acute faculty of sight into the future; she learned of the suffering of Israel from the hearing of court trials over which she presided.

V. 6. "And she sent and called Barak and said unto him, hath not Jehovah the God of Israel, commanded saying, go draw upon Mount Tabor, and take with thee ten thousand men of the children of Naphtali and of the children of Zebulun?" Deborah speaks as a prophetess, announcing God's commands, not her opinion; declaring God's promises, not merely her own hopes or wishes.

V. 7. "And I will draw unto thee, to the river Kishon, Sisera, the captain of Jabin's army, with his chariots and his multitude; and I will deliver him into thy hand." The promise of God is enough to insure success then as well as now. When God draws near there is no danger for he will deliver.

V. 8. "And Barak said unto her, if thou wilt go with me, then I will go; but if thou wilt not go with me, I will not go." Barak longed for the association of one of God's elect, especially when encountering danger. Deborah's superior ability and leadership did not make Barak jealous; he did not refuse to serve under her because she was a woman.

V. 9. "And she said, I will surely go with thee; notwithstanding, the journey that thou takest shall not be for thine honor; for Jehovah will sell Sisera into the hand of a woman. And Deborah rose and went with Barak to Kadesh." The journey of ninety miles was hard, but Deborah did not flinch. The weakness of leaders is that of seeking leadership and place of power rather than serving God, for the victory Deborah said "shall not be for thine honor."

V. 10. "And Barak called Zebulun and Naphtali together to Kadesh. And there went up ten thousand men at his feet; and Deborah went with him. The beautiful harmony with which these two leading characters worked together was the chief secret of their success.

Goes Back Centuries

In 1633 the plague visited the valleys of the Bavarian highlands and finally claimed about 40 victims in the village of Oberammergau. The vow was taken that if the scourge was turned from their homes the villagers would give once in ten years a play commemorating the life and passion of Christ. The scourge abated, and since that time the "Passion Play" has been given.

Fiery!

"You have made your hero too inflammable, I'm afraid," said the critic to the young author. "To begin with, he has a lantern jaw. In chapter 2 his whole face lit up; in chapter 3 his cheeks flamed. He gave a burning glance in chapter 10 and after blazing with wrath and boiling with rage he administered a scorching rebuke in the last five pages."

Sparrow's Many Songs

One song sparrow may have as many as 20 different songs, says Nature Magazine, each as much his own exclusive property as though copyright. But all of these, as well as the songs of all other song sparrows, have certain qualities that proclaim that the singers belong to that species and no other.

ASHVILLE BALL OUTFIT HAS CHANCE TO GAIN IN LEAGUE

Costlow To Be After Fifth Victory When Valley Crossing Invades Village Lot For Sunday Encounter—Team Is Only Two Games Out of First Place With Schedule Favoring It Greatly.

With four consecutive victories to their credit, the Ashville ball team meets the hard hitting Valley Crossing nine, Sunday afternoon at Community Park, Ashville, in a regularly scheduled Surburban League game. Play will start promptly at 2:30.

The Ashville team is now in third place in the league standing and only two games out of first place. With seven games remaining on their schedule, five of which will be played on the home diamond, Ashville has an excellent opportunity to climb to the top. Four of their remaining games are with teams which now occupy a lower place in the official standing than the Ashville nine, so if Ashville continues the excellent brand of ball they have exhibited in their last four games, and each of these contests should result in a victory. Two games remain to be played with the leading Lithopolis team and one with the second place New Albany nine, thus assuring Ashville of an opportunity to battle their way to the top rung in the pennant scramble.

Since the signing of Costlow for mound duty four weeks ago the Ashville team has played a consistently aggressive game while winning four consecutive victories. Confidence in this lad as a steady reliable pitcher, has resulted in a heads-up brand of ball on the part of every member of the team, so that now the entire squad is playing on its toes ready to take advantage of the breaks which so often result in victory.

Costlow, Ashville's pitching ace, will of course be on the mound again Sunday. This lad has four victories to his credit and no defeats chalked up against him this year, and it is confidently expected that he will continue his excellent work Sunday. No changes of any kind will be made in the Ashville lineup, as the manager and even most severe critics of all, the fans are satisfied with the team which has taken the field in the last few games.

However, an easy victory is not expected Sunday, as the Valley Crossing nine comes to Ashville with the reputation of being sluggers and wreckers of pennant hopes. They forced New Albany and later Obetz out of the lead by defeating them at a critical time, and now expect to stop the winning streak of the Ashville team. So a hard fought game may be expected.

Following are the Surburban League standings and the schedule of remaining games for the Ash-

Tale of Forced "Endurance"

Tales of endurance records come daily from all parts of the country, mostly voluntary. Little Clifford Peters, 10, of Albany, N. Y., pictured above, had his endurance forced on him and is shown as he explained to District Attorney McCrean how his parents chained him to a post in the basement of their home each day since vacation time.

Theatres

AT THE METROPOLITAN

A smashing underworld talkie, with a tense love story of unparalleled dramatic interest, and a terrific climax in the most realistic prize fight ever staged for motion pictures, are the strong points in James Cruze's "The Big Fight," sensational photoplay based on the Belasco stage success, announced for the Metropolitan Theatre on Sunday, Monday and Tuesday.

Rarely has such an entertaining film, mixing broad humor and gripping suspense, been presented. Underworld characters, revealed in the most realistic settings, are involved in the intriguing love story of a pretty man and a celebrated fighter. Their romance is fraught with danger, and beset with obstacles on every side, their triumph is all the greater when the foes of their happiness are finally overcome.

Lola Lane plays the role of Shirley, a maniac whose love for the Tiger has to be sacrificed to her affection for her brother. When the latter is in danger, held as a pawn in an underworld intrigue, Shirley is confronted with the dilemma of betraying the man she loves in order to rescue her brother from the clutches of an underworld gang. How she manages to preserve both loves forms the chief interest in this tensely entertaining photoplay.

Lola Lane, Quinn Williams, Stephen Fitch and Ralph Ince head a large cast.

AT THE CLIFTONA

"Song of the Flame," coming to the Cliftona Theatre is the biggest operetta ever brought to the talking screen. It is adapted from the famous stage production by Arthur Hammerstein. Oscar Hammerstein II and Otto Harbach wrote the lyrics, while George Gershwin and Herbert Stothart composed the music.

In transferring the operetta to the screen, additional music was found necessary. The new melodies were written by Grant Clark, Harry Akst and Eddie Ward, staff composers at the First National Studio, where the all-Technicolor film was produced.

The hit number is "Song of the Flame," which is taken from the stage version. This is the stirring national song which is sung by Bernice Claire and Alexander Gray, the romantic leads, and a huge chorus. "The Cossack Love Song" and "Wander Away" are other popular numbers retained from the stage version. The first is sung by Gray and Miss Claire and the second by Alice Gentile, grand opera star.

Clark and Akst were responsible for such additional numbers as "Liberty," "The Goose Hangs High" and "Petrograd." Ward and Clark wrote the beautiful "Love Duets" sung by Miss Claire and Gray.

AT THE GRAND

The favorite pastime of Port Roach who plays one of the principal comedy roles in "So Long Letty," the Warner Bros. and Vitaphone production which is coming to the Grand Theatre is golf. But he doesn't play it, he's just a golfer. That would be a real calamity.

SELECTS WIN FROM FOX 9

Eleven Inning Battle Annexed By Local Stars Friday By 7-6 Score.

The Circleville Selects claimed another victory in an eleven inning game that was one of the most interesting and fastest they have played. Fox Postoffice All Stars were the victims of the Selects, a score of 7 to 6 at Mason's ball park.

The Selects started their scoring in the latter part of the first inning when they succeeded in sending Earl Radcliff across the rubber for the first count. They scored again in the second frame, when Walter Brungs succeeded in making his way across the home plate. The fourth frame, the Selects were caught off guard and before they could tighten up the Foxmen had sent four men across the rubber to take a two run lead. In the sixth they again scored another run while the locals scored also in that frame.

The Selects came back strong in the seventh to score three more runs and establish a one run lead which they held until the ninth stanza when George of the Fox aggregation scored. From then on it was nip and tuck, for neither team was able to score through the other defense until in the eleventh when the Selects put another man across the plate to win. Batteries for both teams were Cottie Radcliff and Earl Radcliff for the Selects, and Hamilton and Grubbs making the battery for the Fox team.

Venetian Potentate

The doze of Venice was the head of the state. Venice was an elective monarchy. The first doge was chosen in 697. The office was abolished in 1797. For many years it had been an empty honor, but for the first 600 years of this form of government the doge had all the same powers as a king.

Why Study Philosophy?

The old adage that "who has studied philosophy will prosper" is well illustrated by the career of the late Dr. J. Edgar Hoover. The man who has been called the "father of the FBI" is a man who has studied philosophy and has applied its principles to the solution of the world's problems.

FOOTBALL PLAYERS FROM 24 COLLEGES TRY FOR SPARTANS

Glasgow, Great Iowa Star, With Lumpkin and Bennett and Byron Eby Make Up Strong Backfield With Other Stars Trying For Positions—Tiny Lewis, Northwestern Star, Also After Position.

PORTSMOUTH, Ohio, July 26—Thirty-four football players will report to Coach Harold W. Griffin Tuesday morning, September 2, for the initial practice of the 1936 football season to try out for a berth on the Spartan National League football team. In this group are 12 members of the 1929 edition of the Spartans, champions of the Tri-State, while there are 21 men who will try out for their first year this season.

Twenty-four universities and colleges are represented in this group. Players will come from as far west as Nebraska and North Dakota, as far north as Wisconsin and Michigan, as far east as Massachusetts and North Carolina, and as far south as Georgia and Tennessee. Twelve backfield men, two centers, six guards, six tackles, and eight ends will battle with each other for one of the 22 permanent posts with the squad. Griffin will pick his permanent squad following the first game.

With one of the most impressive looking aggregation of football stars that could be gathered since the close of last season, Coach Griffin's Spartans will make their debut this year in the National Football League. The team was undefeated last year outside of the league.

Some of the greatest college stars who galloped the gridiron in 1929, who made sport fame and history for a score of universities all over the United States and who have since graduated from school, will form the first lineup of the team.

Included in the list of players are men of All American fame, men who have gained all conference recognition in outstanding schools and men whose names have been emblazoned across the sport pages of hundreds of American newspapers.

The complete roster will include Bill Glasgow, University of Iowa, All American halfback in 1929. Chosen by the Chicago Tribune as the most valuable man in the Western Conference. Grantland Rice, who has named him the authentic All American team each year for College Sports magazine said: "Glasgow is the Cagle type. He had everything, the help from team mates both in defensive and offensive play. He was one of the best backs of recent years. Glasgow was a hard running streak who was at his best when the war became hottest. He was one of the best quick kickers from coast to coast. With his offensive strength he was just as good in defensive play." Glasgow weighs 190 pounds and is six feet tall.

Charles "Chuck" Bennett of Indiana University, captain in 1928, and All Western halfback in 1926-27-28. Bennett was also chosen on numerous All American teams. He was also awarded the "most valuable man" Chicago Tribune trophy in 1928. The Spartans have the distinction of being the only professional team to boast two players who have won this award. Bennett was a star of the 1929 Spartan team. He is five feet, 11 inches tall and tips the beam at 195 pounds.

Griffin plans to use Bennett on right half and Glasgow on left half. Both are speed artists. Glasgow will be depended upon to do the major part of the punting. "Tiny" Lewis of Northwestern University, All Western fullback in 1927 and Second All American choice the same year will undoubtedly make a good run for his position. Lewis is one of the fiercest line plungers in pro football. He is six feet two inches tall and weighs and devote his time to the coaching and business end of the club. Brown weighs 200 pounds and is six feet tall. Leading the list of guards is Fred Roberts, six feet two inches tall and 200 pounds, All Western guard of Iowa University. Roberts is expected to stand out as one of the best guards in the National League this fall.

Three guards of the 1929 Spartans are returning: Ernest Meyer, former captain of Geneva University, Ebb DeWeese of Dayton University, and Harry Richmond of Illinois.

In addition are Walter Ambros, captain of Carroll College in 1929 and All Wisconsin guard last fall. He weighs 205 pounds and is six feet tall, and Carroll Ringwalt of Indiana, a center and guard. He weighs 220 pounds and is six feet tall.

To head the list of tackles is Bud Harris, formerly of Marietta. Harris is six feet three inches tall and weighs 230 pounds. He is in the opinion of many critics, one of the greatest tackles of professional football. He has had several years of experience in pro football which will aid in standing the younger men.

Vincent Schleuser, All Western tackle of Iowa University in 1928, weighing 220 pounds and standing six feet three inches, is expected to win a place with the team.

Other tackles who will report are Joslin of Michigan State College, "Spider" Johnson, University of Chattanooga, and Don McEntire of Miami who plays both tackle and end, and Harold Stotsberry, captain of the 1929 St. Xavier team.

The Spartan strong point is in the end positions which will be filled by three stars of last fall, Chal Joseph of Ohio State, Emil Mayer of Catholic University and Chuck Braidwood of Chattanooga and other new men who include Al Alzern of Holy Cross, given honorable mention on the New York Sun's All American team, Harry Morgan of North Carolina State, Frank O'Bryan, captain of St. Xavier last fall and Koester Christensen of Michigan State College. O'Bryan was an All Ohio choice and Christensen was an All Michigan choice.

DON'T BE A SLAVE TO LAXATIVES

Mrs. E. G. Ward, 201 W. 1st St., Newport, Ky., says, "My husband and I are actually slaves to laxatives, and I am doing ourselves with something that is not good for us. Just couldn't stop. It got to be a habit. We even gave our children laxatives as candy. Little did we realize that we were only aggravating and not relieving the cause of the constipation. How bad it was, indigestion and constipation, and I was in the hospital."

Our druggist recommended that we take the Little Liver Pills. He said these little vegetable pills would turn up the liver, stir up the bile, which acts as an antiseptic, keeps the food from rotting, and poisoning the blood. They are not habit forming and thoroughly cleanse the upper and lower bowel. Laxatives fail to do this.

Cartier's Little Liver Pills are sold at all Druggists in 25c red paper packages.

Dollar Not Stable
The average individual fails to realize the value of a dollar is not level. Because gold is worth about $20 an ounce he considers the dollar stable. The price of gold is fixed only in terms of things it will purchase. BYRD AND THE POLAR EXPEDITIONS

Chapter IV

TO William Byrd III, whose son, another William, had died for England on a battlefield in France, and whose second son, Thomas Taylor, was a captain in the Kings' army, such talk was more disturbing than any loss of lands, however wide and rich. Nor was it any the less disturbing because even such solid, consequential men as Colonel George Washington were inclined to believe that it was proper talk. The third American Byrd knew and admired Washington, had commanded a regiment alongside Washington's regiment in the army of Braddock, when that stubborn general went out to fight the Indians. But it was one thing to know and admire. And agree with Washington's views Colonel William Byrd III could not.

It was an intolerable situation from the very beginning. It became more intolerable as the years passed, as war became not a threat but a bitter, unbearable actuality. And in the year 1777, on the first day of January when all the rest of his countrymen were welcoming a new twelve months, a sure harbinger of better times, the aging royalist took his own life. In every line, however rugged, there are nearly always such weaklings. It is proof of the true quality of the line that it continues in spite of them.

Continue the Byrds did. They were, in their immediate numbers, nine. Eight children and the widow. And this, perhaps, is a proper moment to say a word of that widow and at least several of the others of those Byrd women, gracious and brave, who came after the intrepid and delightful Mary Horsmanden of Kent.

First brief mention must be made of Lucy, beloved wife of the second William Byrd. She did little, unless it be much to have made her husband so happy that he remained eight years inconceivable in a time when swift second marriages were the fashion. But two contributions she did make to the Byrd tradition. The first was a name. One of her relatives was George Evelyn of Surrey. She must have been fond of him for one of her daughters took his surname for a given name, and by one of those oddities so often encountered in genealogical records, it continued to be a favorite in the family, though among the men. There have been no less than four of the Byrd men, including the present subject of this narrative, who have borne the name of "Evelyn."

The second contribution of Lucy Byrd was the daughter, whose name has been so often repeated in the family. Around that daughter centres one of those tragic stories which never fail to stir the human heart. It was Evelyn who became the reigning belle of London when her a different sort. She was a second wife and from some ancestor she had received the inner strength which her husband lacked. She stayed on in the great house at Westover, harried by Benedict Arnold's army twice, stormed once by Cornwall's men. Always soldiers of one side or another were quartered in the stately rooms which once had been the pride of her extravagant, reckless husband. But she held it until she died and her children were able to sell it and so obtain at least a small inheritance to divide among themselves. It may be that it was in no small degree to that inheritance that several of her male grandchildren were able to climb back at least part way up to that social eminence which had been their grandfather's. One of these, a Francis Byrd, became a Lieutenant-Colonel in the War of 1812, gained distinction therein, and still greater distinction at Tripoli. In his later years he wore a sword which his State gave him for bravery in the presence of his country enemies. Another, John also became an officer in the War of 1812. He was killed in action. All-Steel Sleepers

The Pullman News says that the first all-steel sleeper was produced in 1907. The change was necessitated when the first tunnels were authorized under the Hudson river into New York city, a stipulation being that no combustible equipment should be used.

Thirty-Four States Ban Mutual Insurance for Public Property
As the result of a close study of the constitutions of the different states William Macinnes, head of the automobile division of the American Surety, discovered that the following named, 34 in all, expressly prohibit the insuring of community property in mutual organizations, namely: Alabama, Arkansas, California, Colorado, Delaware, Florida, Georgia, Idaho, Illinois, Iowa, Kentucky, Louisiana, Maine, Maryland, Michigan, Minnesota, Mississippi, Missouri, Montana, Nebraska, Nevada, New Jersey, New York, North Carolina, North Dakota, Ohio, Oregon, South Carolina, South Dakota, Texas, Virginia, Washington, West Virginia, Wisconsin and Wyoming.

The prohibition in Mississippi is modified, however, to the extent that neither the state nor any municipality therein shall lend its credit unless two-thirds of the qualified voters of such county, city or town at a special or regular election give assent.

The constitution of Missouri contains a provision that the state shall not own or be liable for any stock in any banking corporation. As Mr. Macinnes logically points out: "If the citizens of certain states in their wisdom have placed in the constitution of their respective commonwealths a proviso that the state cannot pledge the credit of its people in connection with mutual insurance a very cogent argument is supplied as to why an individual should not take upon himself the responsibilities assumed when mutual insurance is purchased."—The National Underwriter.

"GRUNDY-McCULLOCH"

"The mis-named Hawley-Smoot tariff abomination should be re-christened the Grundy-McCulloch act. Since Joe Grundy, the king of lobbyists, is the acknowledged daddy of the outrageous rates and Senator Roscoe C. McCulloch, of Ohio, now is being hailed as the proud parent of the flexible provision, historical accuracy demands that the monstrosity be properly labeled."

With this observation, Henry G. Brunner, chairman of the Democratic state executive committee, today directed attention to a news dispatch disclosing what is described as "the inside story" of the flexible rate section of the new tariff legislation.

"The Washington news bureau of a reliable Columbus newspaper tells its readers: 'Now that the new tariff act is in full operation the inside story of the flexible rate provision can be told. Originally it was, both in substance and language, the work of the junior senator from Ohio. As amended and finally enacted it was still McCulloch's job and so acknowledged by President Hoover.' Brunner's statement pointed out.

"We read also in this inside story: 'The president, after intensive study, decided McCulloch had provided him exactly what he had been looking for. McCulloch received the president's personal appreciation.'"

"With co-authorship thus revealed, simple justice requires that Senator McCulloch be given full credit and that henceforth this instrument of profiteering privilege be recognized as the Grundy-McCulloch tariff act."

"Obviously the inside story was presented to the press with intent to minimize. Senator McCulloch's vote for the tariff raid and against the public interest, the manifest purpose is to exalt him as the beneficent creator of the mythical flexibility boon with which the administration hopes to fool the voters while they are being gouged by the higher-than-high protection pillagers."

"Thus is being laid the smoke screen behind which Senator McCulloch and the administration plan to do a lot of talking about flexibility in the fall campaign. The Ohio electorate should not be so easily diverted from the real issue of grossly unfair tariff rates and the resultant loss of foreign trade, the closing of factories, the increase of unemployment and inflation of the cost of living."

"Let the voters be warned that while their attention is distracted with fascinating patter about the blessings of the flexible provision the beneficiaries of the tariff, like pickpockets in a crowd, will be making off with the contents of their wallets."

"As the flexible provision was Senator McCulloch's lame excuse for voting for the tariff, when he spoke to empty seats in the Senate debate, so it will be his deceptive defense when he seeks to justify his appeal for re-election."

"If the voters, cautioned by this early notice of the flexibility trick, remain alert neither the senator appointed by Governor M. Y. Cooper nor the eighteen Ohio congressmen who voted with Grundy will get away with it. They will be decisively voted out of their seats."

"To refresh memories it should be recalled that when editors, bankers, manufacturers, economists, farm leaders and consumers generally were denouncing the tariff bill and predicting it would further decrease our vanishing prosperity, its perpetrators advanced the silly argument that the flexible provision saved the bill."

"This provision gives the president power, on recommendation of the Tariff Commission, to change rates up to 50 per cent. Offering it as a protective device, the tariff defenders were in fact admitting that the president could make them right."

"Let it be remembered that Senator McCulloch's discovery of the flexibility idea is not new. It was incorporated in the Fordney-McCumber act under the same pretense. And it was never used as the consumers were told it would be used. Instead it was used to make high protection duties still higher. President Hoover himself has used it five times and always to increase duties. Moreover, under the flexible system any interest at any time may come demanding a revision of rates and, thus business, already disturbed by too much governmental agitation, may be kept in a state of constant unrest."

"The flexibility provision of the Grundy-McCulloch tariff is not likely to start any more fires under factory buffers or create any more jobs than its predecessor. On the contrary, it is certain to stifle or destroy business further while the greedy Grundy campaign fund contributors are taking advantage of it to force rates higher. As a campaign alibi its virtues will be sung loudly by the Hoover Happiness Boys who will not be chanting the inspiring 'Full Dinner Pail' number with their accustomed lustiness this year."

THE NEXT TWENTY MILLION

The census figures are so near final tabulation that the director takes a chance. He says that on April 1 this year there were just about 122,957,000 people in this country. Call it for convenience 123,000,000. It is probably that much by now anyway. And a whopping big population it is.

Ten years ago we had 105,710,000. Here is a gain of more than 17,000,000 in a decade. It is like adding a nation to a nation. The gain alone is nearly twice the population of Canada. And we have had little immigration in this decade. No race suicide here!

The same rate of gain would add about 20,000,000 in the next ten years.

Here is something for business men to think about. It provokes optimism. Twenty million more producers and consumers. Business will be just that much bigger in 10 years, even if standards rise.

Let doleful real estate dealers and owners think what it means to them. Twenty million more people needing homes—that will help city values. Twenty million more people needing food—that will help farm values.

JOB ROTATION

The Goodyear Company has a new plan to tide labor over a dull period. It rotates jobs in the production departments, working men seven weeks and then laying them off one week. This prevents dropping one-eighth of the force until business picks up. It means that every employee takes his share of the lay-off as well as his share of the work. The men are said to be satisfied with the arrangement.

This "staggering" system looks like a valuable addition to the device now being sought to make dull periods as tolerable as possible to the wage-earners. It would be still better if supplemented by some plan of unemployment insurance or benefits such as several big corporations are already undertaking, the funds being provided jointly by employers and employees.

The most hopeful thing about such arrangements is the fact that capital and labor are now able to tackle the employment problem amicably and co-operatively instead of feeling as they used to in times of depression.

A WEIGHTY PROBLEM

"WHERE'S EMILY?"

by CAROLYN WELLS

CHAPTER XXXIX.

"NOT so deep as the big ravine," he said, "but a long enough fall to kill anybody. I see they've fixed up the vines."

"Yes, the Village Improvement Society looked after that as soon as the police allowed it. Now," as Stone started on again, "there's the Pennington house."

"Where?"

"Look higher up. See, you can just see the roof through the trees."

"Gracious, I shouldn't want to dive there. Why don't they cut out enough to make a clearing?"

"It doesn't seem quite so treacherous when you get up to it," volunteered Betty. "Want to go up?"

"Can't see any reason for it," Stone said, looking at his watch. "Guess we'd better be about our business. Where's the hospital?"

"It was pointed out to him, but he took slight interest."

"What I want now," he said, "is to have you take me to call briefly on two or three of the most knowing people in Hilldale, I mean the ones who know most about gossip going on, and include, if you please, the lady who was last at the tea—Marsden, is the name?"

"All right," Betty chirped, feeling that this was her chance. "I'll know where to go. Pete. Not the Stevensons, not the Ballards. The Marsdens come first, and then Sally Kirke's and Jane Wolcott's."

"Good choice," Pete approved. "Marsden's it is."

They went to the Marsden house, another large, beautiful mansion, and were received most kindly.

Mrs. Marsden, an elderly dame, was disinclined to talk much, but her niece a vivacious young person more than made up for it.

"Look it just too terrible!" Miss Marsden exclaimed. "To think of Emily and Pauline both being there with us at the tea, and now—where are they?"

Her dramatic rendition of these words was accompanied by eloquent gestures of despairing inquiry.

Fleming Stone gave her no direct answer, but said:

"That's what we're trying to learn, Miss Marsden. Maybe you can help us. Have you a good memory?"

"Yes," she declared. "Why, Auntie says I can remember—"

Stone cut short her reminiscences, not rudely, but decidedly.

"Then, please see if you can remember the exact happenings of your departure from Knollwood after the tea there last Thursday."

"Of course I can; I've often thought it over. It seems so clear."

"Well, it just as it happened."

"Why, it was this way. I don't know anything about time, for I never do. But Auntie and I were waiting to shake hands and say good-by to Mrs. Bell. We had already told Emily we were going. The affair was informal, you know, but we always are careful to be polite to Mrs. Bell."

off toward Wallace's and Mrs. Pennington kept straight on. She came to the bridge over the little ravine, and she stopped and stood there, as if she was waiting for her husband. So, we passed her there. I was going to speak to her, but she was leaning over the rail, and she didn't look up or turn around, so I didn't think I'd better speak. I didn't know her so awfully well. So, we went on, and, of course, I thought no more about it then. We turned at the bend, and I couldn't see her any more, and I didn't look back any way. I simply assumed that she waited for her husband and they went on home together. That's all I know about it."

"Thank you, Miss Marsden, you've stated it very clearly. And you saw nothing of Miss Duane?"

"Nothing at all."

"You don't know whether Mrs. Pennington had on a fur neck-piece or not?"

"I couldn't swear to that. I think she had nothing of the sort, anyway not around her neck. But she might have had one in her hand."

"You've told this story before?"

"Oh, Lord, yes. Every member of the police force wanted to hear people, so she went at it with gusto."

"He's a dear," she said, "a perfect dear! Some people say he's a faker, but I don't care anything about that. I mean, I don't care whether he is or not. He interests me tremendously, and I just simply adore him. Oh, he has such ways with him! Why, just the way he rolls his eyes is too adorable! You can't get me to say a word against that gorgeous person!"

"I don't want you to," and Stone smiled in sympathy with her enthusiasm. "But, with all your admiration of him, don't you sometimes think he's just a wee bit mercenary?"

"Aren't we all?" she challenged. "Now, don't you stir up any trouble for that ray of sunlight, or you'll have me to reckon with."

Clearly, Miss Marsden was far more deeply interested in the Hindu than in either of her two friends to whom disaster had come, and feeling he had learned all she could tell him, Stone rose to go.

"Well, by ginger, I'll bet you didn't learn much there," opined Gibby, as they took to the road again.

"All's fish that comes to my net," Stone murmured in reply.

"Now for the gossipiest tongue in all Hilldale."

"Follow me," said Betty, importantly, and she led them to Sally Kirke's charming cottage.

Smaller than most of the houses, it was a love of a bijou residence, and again Stone found his sense of aesthetic values gratified by the exquisite interior of Miss Kirke's home.

"GRUNDY-McCULLOCH"
The mis-named Hawley-Spear tariff abomination should be christened the Grundy-McCulloch act. Since Joe Grundy, the king of lobbyists, is the acknowledged daddy of the outrageous rates and Senator Roscoe C. McCulloch, of Ohio, now is being hailed as the proud parent of the flexible provision, historical accuracy demands that the monstrosity be properly labeled.

With this observation, Henry C. Brunner, chairman of the Democratic state executive committee, today directed attention to a new dispatch disclosing what is described as "the inside story" of the flexible rate section of the new tariff legislation.

"The Washington news bureau of a reliable Columbus newspaper tells its readers: 'Now that the new tariff act is in full operation, the inside story of the flexible provision can be told. Originally it was, both in substance and language, the work of the junior senator from Ohio. As amended and finally enacted it was still McCulloch's job and so acknowledged by President Hoover,' Brunner's statement pointed out.

"We read also in this inside story: 'The president, after intensive study, decided McCulloch and provided him exactly what he had been looking for. McCulloch received the president's personal appreciation.

"With co-authorship thus revealed, simple justice requires that Senator McCulloch be given full credit and that henceforth this instrument of profiteering privileges be recognized as the Grundy-McCulloch tariff act.

"Obviously the inside story was presented to the press with intent to minimize Senator McCulloch's vote for the tariff and against the public interest," the manifesto purpose is to exalt him as the beneficent creator of the mythical flexibility boon with which the administration hopes to fool the voters while they are being gouged by the higher-than-high protection pillagers.

"Thus is being laid the smoke screen behind which Senator McCulloch and the administration plan to do a lot of talking about flexibility in the fall campaign. The Ohio electorate should not be so easily diverted from the issue of grossly unfair tariff rates and the resultant loss of foreign trade, the closing of factories, the increase of unemployment and the inflation of the cost of living.

"Let the voters be warned that while their attention is distracted with fascinating patter about the blessings of the flexible provision, the beneficiaries of the tariff pickpockets in a crowd, will be making off with the contents of their wallets.

"As the flexible provision and Senator McCulloch's lame excuse for voting for the tariff when he spoke to empty seats in the Senate debate, so it will be his feeble defense when he seeks to qualify his appeal for re-election.

"If the voters, could be given early notice of the flexible provision, they would remain alert and not be appointed by the administration. Cooper nor the eight Democratic congressmen who voted for the bill will get away with it. It will be decisively voted out of seats.

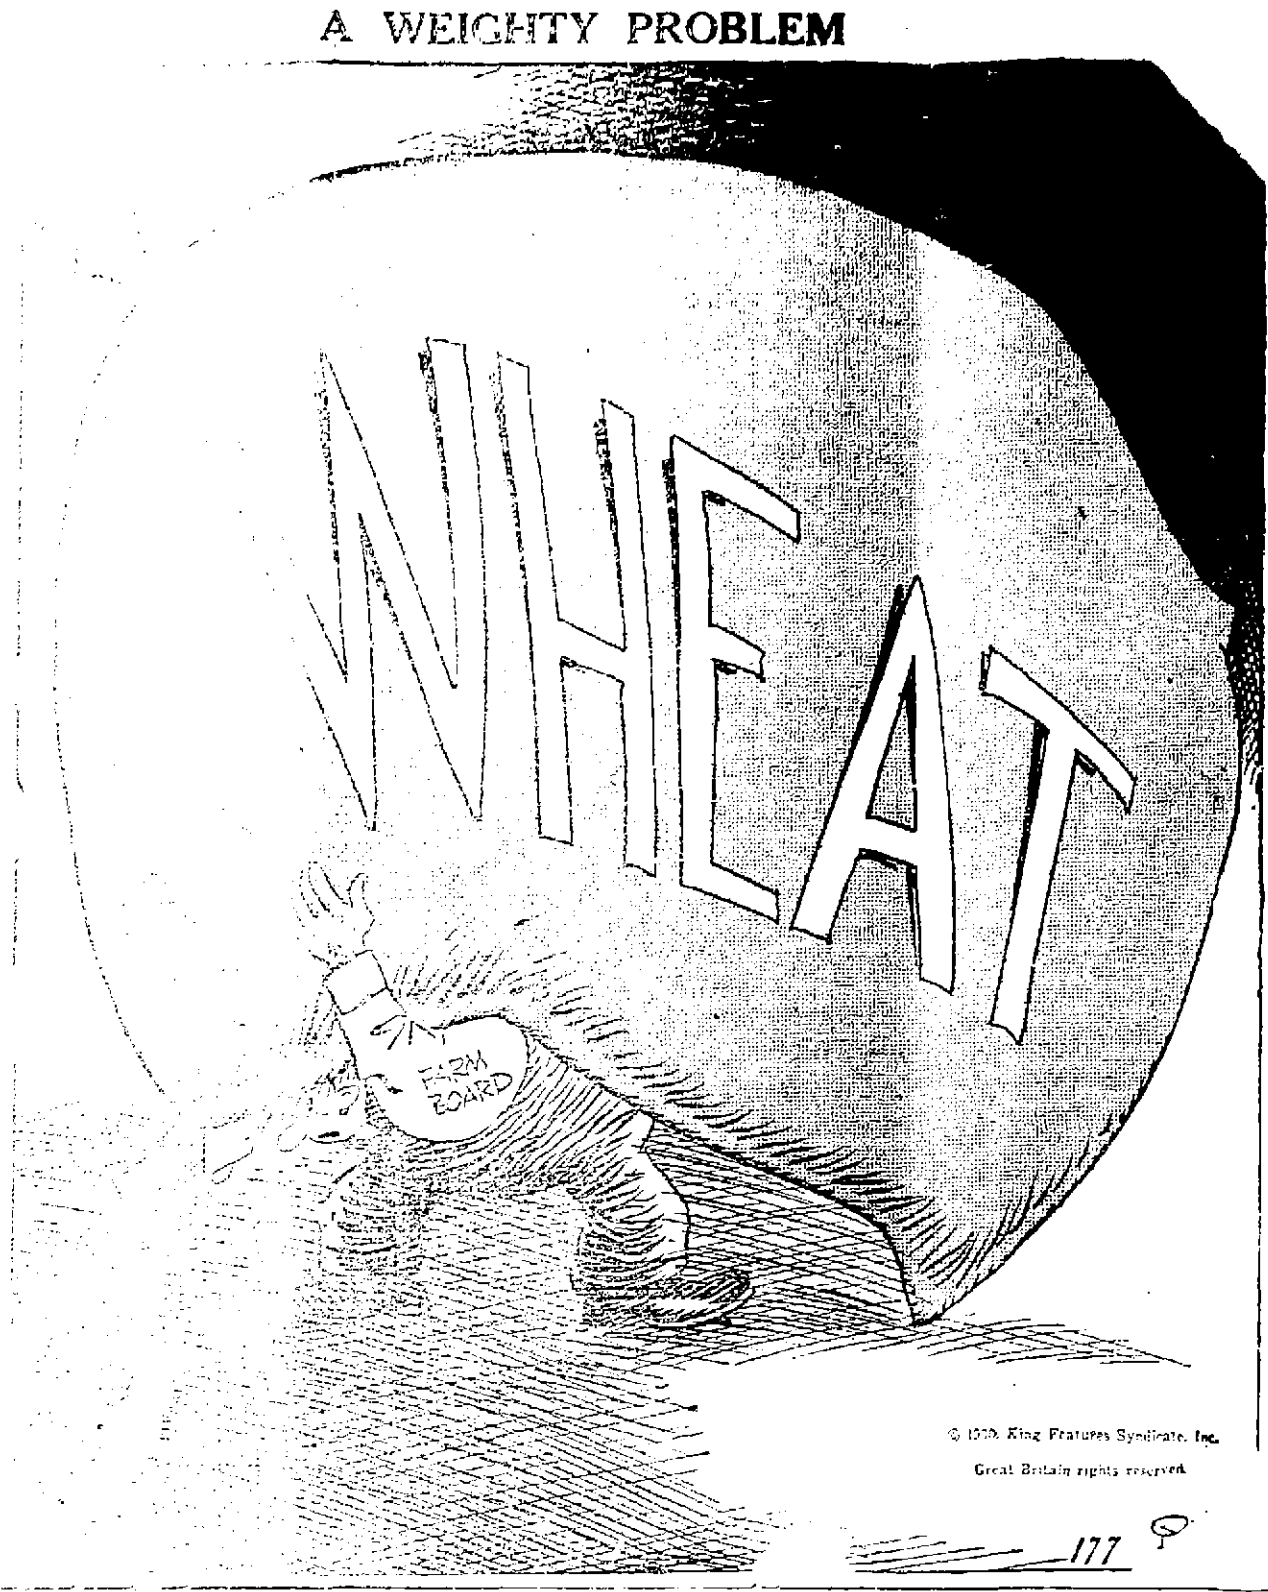

"To refresh memory, it should be recalled that when the tariff makers, manufacturers and farm leaders generally were demanding a bill and predicting that it would decrease our unemployment and its perpetration was the argument that the tariff saved the jobs.

"This provision of the tariff act, which gave the Tariff Commission the power to raise rates up to 100 percent, it as a protection for the defenders of the tariff. The rates were to be raised so high that the producers would be ruined.

"Let it be recalled that Senator McCulloch's flexible provision was incorporated into the tariff act by the Cumber act. It was a compromise. And it was the consumers who were to be used. It was to make high prices higher. It was to increase the cost of living.

"The flexible provision was a revision of the tariff. It was a business device. It was a much government. It was kept in a state of flux. It was a revision of the tariff. It was a business device. It was a much government. It was kept in a state of flux.

"The flexible provision was a revision of the tariff. It was a business device. It was a much government. It was kept in a state of flux. It was a revision of the tariff. It was a business device. It was a much government. It was kept in a state of flux.

WHERE'S EMILY?

by CAROLYN WELLS

CHAPTER XXIII
"What a dump as the big rain cloud," said the little man, "and how much rain it will bring down! I am sure they've fixed up the place."

"To the village. Improvement Society has been after that as soon as the police allowed it. Now," he said, "I don't know her so awfully well. So, we went on, and, of course, I thought no more about it then. We turned at the bend, and I couldn't see her any more, and I didn't look back any more. I simply assumed that she went on home together. That's all I know about it."

"Thank you, Miss Marsden, you've stated it very clearly. And you saw nothing of Miss Duane?"

"Nothing at all."

"You don't know whether Mrs. Pennington had on a fur neck-piece or not?"

"I couldn't swear to that. I think she had nothing of the sort, anyway, not around her neck. But she might have had one in her hand."

"You've told this story before?"

"Oh, Lord, yes. Every member of the police force wanted to hear it."

"He's a dear," she said, "a perfect dear! Some people say he's a faker, but I don't care anything about that. I mean, I don't care whether he is or not. He interests me tremendously, and I just simply adore him. Oh, he has such ways with him! Why, just the way he rolls his eyes is too adorable! You can't get me to say a word against that gorgeous person!"

"I don't want you to," and Stone smiled in sympathy with her enthusiasm. "But, with all your admiration of him, don't you sometimes think he's just a wee bit mercenary?"

"Aren't we all?" she challenged. "Now, don't you stir up any trouble for that ray of sunlight, or you'll have me to reckon with."

Clearly, Miss Marsden was far more deeply interested in the Hindu than in either of her two friends to whom disaster had come, and feeling he had learned all she could tell him, Stone rose to go. "Well, by ginner, I'll bet you didn't learn much there," opined Gibby, as they took to the road again. "All's fish that comes to my net."

Mrs. Marsden, an elderly dame, was disinclined to talk much, but her niece more than made up for it.

"I don't know her so awfully well. So, we went on, and, of course, I thought no more about it then. We turned at the bend, and I couldn't see her any more, and I didn't look back any more. I simply assumed that she went on home together. That's all I know about it."

Skin Diseases Due to Basic Troubles

Psoriasis, a Most Common and Obsolete Type, Is Usually a Symptom of Deeper Faults.

By R. S. COPELAND, M. D.
U. S. Senator from New York
Former Commissioner of Health
New York City.

Skin diseases are of many types. "Psoriasis," in some form, is the one which is most frequently met. It is a persistent, obstinate ailment, often resisting every effort at control.

A person may have it and yet otherwise appear to be in perfect health. It is probable, however, there is some underlying cause which is really a form of disability. It may be some fault in digestion, or in the blood, or in the glands of the skin.

The skin disturbance may appear in one patch or in several well-defined patches. There is a red background, and this is covered with the delicate, silvery scales of crusts. In children the crusts may form on the scalp, and when these are rubbed off there is bleeding.

Some authorities in skin diseases believe that kidney trouble or gout is present in the system and the skin disturbance is only a symptom. In psoriasis or other chronic skin disorders it is to be suspected that the intestinal tract is out of order. Constipation forms one of the greatest foes to normal health. In its chronic form it produces degenerative changes in the system. The waste of the body, not being properly eliminated, encourages the development of bacterial poisons. These are carried to every part of the body, including the skin. It is not to be wondered at then that skin diseases follow.

It is most important that the bowels be kept open, either by proper diet and exercise, or, failing this, by laxatives that are found to fit your own particular case and as prescribed by your doctor. Sometimes simple enemys taken at intervals will serve to keep the intestinal tract free from the waste which otherwise clogs it. But the important thing is that the waste products be carried away by proper kidney and intestinal action.

The intense itching accompanying psoriasis is greatly relieved by a sponge bath. Either boric acid or bicarbonate of soda may be added to the water. Sea baths are unusually refreshing in these cases.

There is no disputing the fact that careful attention should be given the diet. Most of the writers on skin diseases urge restriction or complete avoidance of rich foods, especially protein foods seem to be disturbing factors in this skin trouble.

It is essential to have a simple diet of easily digested foods. The skin must be kept in perfect condition as to cleanliness. Lastly, and most important, follow your doctor's orders as to correcting the underlying cause of your skin trouble, whatever it is.

Answers to Health Queries
Miss M. H. Q.—What do you advise me to do? I have a lump the size of a pencil head under my arm.

A.—It would be wise to consult a doctor for an examination. A lump of any kind usually requires surgical procedure. Do not neglect it. It probably is entirely harmless, but the safe thing is to find out at once.

All Outdoors and Where To Go

A halt has been called by Mussolini on the practice of blinding birds with red hot needles. In Italy since the days of ancient Rome bird mongers have captured songsters, put out their eyes and sold them in the markets. Blinded birds call and sing almost continuously. This also renders them valuable as decoys to attract other birds to nets and snares or to twigs smeared with glue. According to T. Gilbert Pearson, president of the International Audubon Societies, the traffic in small birds has long been a lucrative trade in Italy. Until recently legislation passed by the Mussolini government, songsters, and insectivorous birds had little or no protection.
The blinded birds are kept in willow cages and are much in demand. Only a small percentage of the birds blinded survive the shock. A captive bird unblinded brings only two lire on the market, while the blinded birds bring 50 lire or more each. Small birds are also sold for food. As a result songsters and insectivorous birds are being sadly depleted in Italy. They are caught by wagon loads in nets stretched high in the air. Italian farmers and fruit growers, as well as those of other European countries suffer because of the destruction of hundreds of thousands of small insectivorous birds.
The Italian when he comes to America knows no game laws, and naturally will kill songbirds. Ohio conservation officers state that the unlearned Italians tell them they make soup from small birds. An educational campaign is being carried on by Ohio Conservation officers among Italian workers wherever possible, in addition to arrests for killing songbirds. Contacts are also being established with their leaders in the Italian communities in Ohio where bird protection can be discussed in their native language.

CONSERVATION NEW TO OHIO
Speaking before a recent meeting of the Portage Fish and Game Protection Association and also the Kiwanis Club at Ravenna, Carl L. Van Voorhis, assistant conservation commissioner, stated that conservation of game is a new thought which the public must be brought to appreciate and understand just as the general public had to be interested in the good roads program 20 years ago. Speaking on the conservation program Van Voorhis said:
"With the increased use of modern labor-saving machinery in manufacture the workman faces a shorter work day and a five day week. Consequently these men are going to have time on their hands for play and it is up to the people of the State of Ohio to provide places where they may take their families and enjoy healthful recreation."
"The people of the State of Ohio give resorts in the state of Michigan alone $2,500,000 a year for recreation. A great share of this money could very well be left in Ohio providing facilities to attract the vacationist."
"Ohio has plenty of resources that could be utilized and developed that would furnish not only the Ohio vacationists with surroundings to suit their desires, but make this state the playground of the nation."
"Ohio, termed the crossroad of the nation, has the best system of highways in the entire United States, but provides no place for the visitors to stop."
The Division of Conservation plans to make places for people to go—state parks, recreational centers, historic sites, nature trails and, in time, public hunting grounds.

COLONEL GROCE HAS BIRTHDAY

The birthday anniversary of Col. Charles E. Groce of S. Court-st was the occasion Friday night for a dinner party at the Pickaway Country club at 6:30 o'clock.

The guests were Col. and Mrs. Groce, Mr. and Mrs. Frank Bennett and daughter Miss Anne Bennett, Mr. and Mrs. C. A. Weldon, Mr. and Mrs. John Boggs, Mr. Charles Shulze, and Mr. and Mrs. Clark Will and son Charles.

AT CELEBRATION FOR BROTHER

Mr. and Mrs. Charles Wright attended the family dinner which honored the 81st birthday anniversary John W. Wright of Chillicothe. The dinner was held at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Wright in that city. A large number of relatives including members of the immediate family of the honor guest as well as the families of his brothers and sisters, assembled for this annual day of festivities.

Large tables were heaped with almost every sort of food for the bountiful dinner, served cafeteria style. A huge three-tier white birthday cake, mounted with the 81 lighted candles, was baked by Mrs. Lincoln Kirk. Mr. Wright was successful in extinguishing the lights in his first attempt.

Mrs. Wright received a number of useful gifts.

This is the first time that Mr. Wright and his brother, Will Wright, of Buckeye Lake, and Charles D. Wright, of Circleville, and his sister, Mrs. C. B. Griffith, had assembled in one of the former's birthday parties since they have become an annual event.

SURPRISE SHOWER FOR NEWLYWEDS

A surprise bridal shower Friday night, announced the marriage of Mr. John Dearth and Miss Hyacinth Catchpole of Columbus, which took place January 20 in Dayton. The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Catchpole of Columbus. The bridegroom is the son of Mr. Walter J. Dearth of E. Main-st., Circleville.

The marriage has been kept a secret, but the secret became known, and the shower, and party Friday night was in the nature of an announcement party.

Attending from Circleville were Mr. Walter J. Dearth, Miss Greta Dearth, Miss Bernese Dearth and Mr. Noel Rader.

Other guests present were Mr. Ralph Gruber, Mr. Hubert Catchpole, Mr. Mack Vessels, Mrs. Etta Fitch and son Paul, Halsey Fitch, Miss Anna Beresh, Miss Lulu Vessels, Miss Lizzie Edwards, Miss Margaret Thissen, Miss Claudia Statler, Miss Glenna Edwards, Gillette Gruber, Allen Lanthorne, Miss Elsie Keller, Miss Mabel Good, Miss Evelyn Chambers, Mrs. R. BYRD AND THE POLAR EXPEDITIONS

Chapter IV

TO William Byrd III, whose son, another William, had died for England on a battlefield in France, and whose second son, Thomas Taylor, was a captain in the Kings' army, such talk was more disturbing than any loss of lands, however wide and rich. Nor was it any the less disturbing because even such solid, consequential men as Colonel George Washington were inclined to believe that it was proper talk. The third American Byrd knew and admired Washington, had commanded a regiment alongside Washington's regiment in the army of Braddock, when that stubborn general went out to fight the Indians. But it was one thing to know and admire. And agree with Washington's views Colonel William Byrd III could not.

It was an intolerable situation from the very beginning. It became more intolerable as the years passed, as war became not a threat but a bitter, unbearable actuality. And in the year 1777, on the first day of January when all the rest of his countrymen were welcoming a new twelve months, a sure harbinger of better times, the aging royalist took his own life. In every line, however rugged, there are nearly always such weaklings. It is proof of the true quality of the line that it continues in spite of them.

Continue the Byrds did. They were, in their immediate numbers, nine. Eight children and the widow. And this, perhaps, is a proper moment to say a word of that widow and at least several of the others of those Byrd women, gracious and brave, who came after the intrepid and delightful Mary Horsmanden of Kent.

First brief mention must be made of Lucy, beloved wife of the second William Byrd. She did little, unless it be much to have made her husband so happy that he remained eight years inconsolable in a time when swift second marriages were the fashion. But two contributions she did make to the Byrd tradition. The first was a name. One of her relatives was George Evelyn of Surrey. She must have been fond of him for one of her daughters took his surname for a given name, and by one of those oddities so often encountered in genealogical records, it continued to be a favorite in the family, though among the men. There have been no less than four of the Byrd men, including the present subject of this narrative, who have borne the name of "Evelyn."

The second contribution of Lucy Byrd was the daughter, whose name has been so often repeated in the family. Around that daughter centres one of those tragic stories which never fail to stir the human heart.

It was Evelyn who became the reigning belle of London when her father, the second William Byrd, decided to remain in that city after his wife died. She was born in 1708 at Westover, and though other children came to him she was always first in his affections. Notwithstanding this preeminence however, her life was as bitterly unhappy in its end as any young girl's life could possibly be.

There are various versions of the love story which brought about that end. The most likely is that which is tied to Charles Mordaunt, grandson and heir of the Earl of Peterborough. Young Mordaunt, unless records lie, was distinguished, manly, handsome. Evelyn Byrd was noble, wealthy, beautiful. There was none other so beautiful in all England and if the wits of the day are to be believed, in all the Continent as well. The two seemed meant for each other. All society, all the court of St. James believed this. Save one.

Unhappily that one was William Byrd II. Notwithstanding that William Byrd II, and the Earl of Peterborough had been staunch friends something had come between them about the time of the forthcoming nuptials of Byrd's lovely daughter and Peterborough's handsome grandson. It may have been cards; though this is doubtful, for both men were far too rich to find the risk of cheating worth while, even had they the inclination. Possibly it may have been religion. Byrd was not a Catholic. Young Mordaunt was.

In any event, Evelyn's father flatly, bluntly, cruelly from the viewpoint of the young couple, refused to give his approval. In a later day it would have mattered little. But in that time daughters obeyed their parents, however unreasonable their commands. They also went into declines in the very act of disobedience. This is what Evelyn Byrd did. She died, and it is probably no exaggeration to say that she died, as much as any one ever did of a broken heart, just a year short of thirty.

Of her one of William Byrd's biographers has written: "Her hand was kissed by Lords Oxford and Chesterfield." Of her "Sneering Harvey approved." She "annexed with Alexander Pope at his Twickenham villa while yet the town was ringing with the success of his Odyssey; she was noticed by Beau Nash, the autocrat of Bath; saw Cibber and Mrs. Oldfield play; read Gulliver's travels as they were first presented to the public by his Reverence, the Dean of St. Patrick's, then resident of Dublin; and from the presence of an Unroyal Royalty, through a society reeking with wine and musk and snuff and scandal, passed back to her plantation home in the new country as unblemished as she came."

So much for the lovely Evelyn Byrd, unhappy daughter of the second William. The story of the widow of the third William is of a different sort. She was a second wife and from some ancestor she had received the inner strength which her husband lacked. She stayed on in the great house at Westover, harried by Benedict Arnold's army twice, stormed once by Cornwall's men. Always soldiers of one side or another were quartered in the stately rooms which once had been the pride of her extravagant, reckless husband. But she held to it until she died and her children were able to sell it and so obtain at least a small inheritance to divide among themselves. It may be that it was in no small degree to that inheritance that several of her male grandchildren were able to climb back at least part way up to that social eminence which had been their grandfather's. One of these, a Francis Byrd, became a Lieutenant-Colonel in the War of 1812, gained distinction therein, and still greater distinction at Tripoli. In his later years he wore a sword which his State gave him for bravery in the presence of his country enemies. Another, John also became an officer in the War of 1812. He was killed in action. Thirty-Four States Ban Mutual Insurance for Public Property

As the result of a close study of the constitutions of the different states William Macinnes, head of the automobile division of the American Surety, discovered that the following named, 34 in all, expressly prohibit the insuring of community property in mutual organizations, namely: Alabama, Arkansas, California, Colorado, Delaware, Florida, Georgia, Idaho, Illinois, Iowa, Kentucky, Louisiana, Maine, Maryland, Michigan, Minnesota, Mississippi, Missouri, Montana, Nebraska, Nevada, New Jersey, New York, North Carolina, North Dakota, Ohio, Oregon, South Carolina, South Dakota, Texas, Virginia, Washington, West Virginia, Wisconsin and Wyoming.

The prohibition in Mississippi is modified, however, to the extent that neither the state nor any municipality therein shall lend its credit unless two-thirds of the qualified voters of such county, city or town at a special or regular election give assent. The constitution of Missouri contains a provision that the state shall not own or be liable for any stock in any banking corporation. As Mr. Macinnes logically points out: "If the citizens of certain states in their wisdom have placed in the constitution of their respective commonwealths a proviso that the state cannot pledge the credit of its people in connection with mutual insurance, a very cogent argument is supplied as to why an individual should not take upon himself the responsibilities assumed when mutual insurance is purchased."—The National Underwriter.
